"As Numerous as the Stars of Heaven"

Abbreviated remarks from URJ Biennial 2019 Address by Rabbi Rick Jacobs, URJ President

....We need to do what Jews have been doing for thousands of years – look to Torah. The key to our future isn't demography; it's theology. Back in Genesis, our ancestors were told over and over that Jewish life was meant to expand and grow, not contract.

God makes this promise to Abraham and Sarah, "I will make your descendants as numerous as the stars of heaven and the sands on the seashore..." (Genesis 22:17)

The Holy One wanted us to have more than a bit part in the unfolding saga of human life. We need to be everywhere, and there needs to be a lot of us, like the stars and sands.

But why Judaism? What does Judaism offer?

In a world starved for meaning and steeped in fear and pain, our tradition is overflowing with spiritual riches. Judaism can help us live lives anchored in wisdom and moral clarity. Judaism gives us rituals, texts and holy days so that we can live joyfully in the rhythm of sacred time. Judaism gives us hope.

I don't need to tell you that there is brokenness and injustice all around us. To live in this moment, if we want to do the sacred work of being God's partners, we need more hands and hearts on deck....

The 54th chapter of Isaiah tells us, "Enlarge the site of your tent." (Isaiah 54:2)...

We need to open more doors – real and virtual – for hungry and curious souls to come in and explore Judaism. Will they all formally join our congregations or even join the Jewish community? Many will; some won't. But if we extend our tent, every part of our Jewish community will benefit. We'll be able to bolster our synagogues and start new ventures that will help revitalize all that we do and all that we are....

... we need to make space across our communities and within our leadership for new people and new ideas. That means building institutions with them, instead of asking them to do it the way we have always done it. It requires each of us to step back a little and let new folks lead so they can leave their imprint on our traditions and culture.

Younger members of our community are more diverse than their parents, more multi-racial, more proudly and openly LGBTQ. In North America, among non-Orthodox Jews, 72 percent of the weddings in the past 20 years have been between a Jewish person and someone who was brought up in a different faith tradition. Our educators already know they can't do the old family tree activity in the same way anymore, expecting everyone to draw lines from Europe to the Statue of Liberty....

Some of our congregations are so polarized that big issues are not discussed for fear of further splintering our already divided communities. I'm certain we can do better. Our congregations must be oases from the venom that is poisoning our public spaces. There are so few places where people who don't vote or think alike, earn, pray, or believe alike, gather on a regular basis. And our Jewish tradition has a deep practice when it comes to diversity of opinion.

Our congregations would be well-served to learn and practice the Talmudic way of having sacred arguments. The Babylonian Talmud is, after all, just a huge collection of arguments between sages who often vehemently disagreed but rarely disrespected their intellectual adversaries.

Our sages didn't avoid tough issues or give up if they couldn't reach consensus. The debate was always civil, as in the case of the great debates between Hillel and Shammai: eilu v'eilu divre Elohim hayim, "these and these are words of the living God." And the Talmud in Mishnah Eduyot 1:5 teaches a minority opinion must be preserved, to learn from in the future. Too often, that is not what happens in our communities or our society.

So make no mistake: Today, on the one hand, we must say out loud that not all positions are legitimate. On the other, while there are not good people on all sides of every issue, there are more legitimate sides than we regularly acknowledge. Intense, serious debates should only be exceeded by the depth of our respect for one another.

Yes, authentic Jewish leaders must still raise their prophetic voices on the great moral issues of the day, but before we do, we need to consider the many sides of any issue. That's what our Civic Engagement Campaign is all about.

It's worth remembering that the founder of our Reform Movement, Isaac Mayer Wise, deliberately chose the word "Union" for the names of our Movement and our seminary, Union of American Hebrew Congregations and Hebrew Union College. Founded right after the Civil War, there was anything but unity in the United States and in our congregations, stretching across the north/south divide. Unity does not require unanimity – but it does require respect, something sorely missing in our wider culture. Our congregations and communities can show others how this is done....

Our commitment to embracing our Jewish diversity and combatting hate is one of the most urgent moral imperatives of our time. That's why, during this Biennial we are asking each of you to commit to our sacred diversity, equity, and inclusion work. It will change our Movement, and it will change each of us for the better.

Our ancient sages created the following blessing for diversity that I want us to say together now. When we are in the presence of many Jews, like we are tonight, we say:

Baruch chacham ha'razeem she'ein da'atam domah zeh l'zeh v'ein partzufayhen domeem zeh l'zeh. Blessed are You, the Sage of all secret things for their minds are not similar to each other and their faces are all unique." (Babylonian Talmud, tractate Berachot 58a)

Embracing our diversity will change who we are, and that change will make us better. It will make our communities and congregations beacons of possibility in our divisive and increasingly hate-filled world.

This isn't easy work. We will have to develop new spiritual muscles to recognize the truly diverse Jewish people God created us to be. But once we do, we can use our strength to take on the issues in our world that are ripping us apart.

February 5, 2020 Board Meeting Highlights

The Board of Directors conducted an online Zoom meeting with Maxie Kalish, Analyst with the URJ. Recently, Temple Beth Sholom, spearheaded by Lorne Ruby, participated in the URJ Benchmarking and Assessment program for examining financial situations of Reform Temples across the United States. The results help congregations compare how they are doing to ones of varying sizes and locations. Our Board is learning valuable and helpful information from this process.

Your Board has committed to writing a monthly article for the Bulletin to help convey important Temple matters to the congregation. The first article will be written by Alan Wisman.

A Grant Committee is being formed. This is very important to our Temple congregation, because funding is available from various sources that will greatly benefit the continued success of Temple Beth Sholom. If you have experience in researching and/or writing grants, or if you have a strong desire to assist in this worthy endeavor, please contact the office. Your help is needed.

Monthly Shabbat Morning Opportunities

Talmud Study – 9:00 – 10:30 am, Saturday, March 7 and 21.

Pirkei Avot consists of the wisdom of our sages concerning the values and ethics of Judaism as reflected in the Oral Law. While I am paraphrasing here, perhaps one of the most famous is Rabbi Tarphon's dictum: "It is not for you to finish.....but neither are you free to desist from it." We shall read Pirkei Avot in small segments, simultaneously looking at and discussing different commentaries that have been written about each portion of it.

We invite and welcome you to join us in what we anticipate will be a very rewarding study. It is not necessary to commit to attending every session. Come as you are interested and able.

Kabbalah Study - 9:00 - 10:30 am, Saturday, March 14 and 28 Introduction to the Zohar, by Arthur Green.

Our group is reading Art Green's excellent and thorough introduction to the Pritzker edition of the Zohar. If you want to get an inside look at the Zohar, please join us for this fascinating read! We will hand out copies in class.

TaNaKh Study – 10:30 am – 12:00 pm, Saturday, March 14

In this group, we are reading the Bible all the way through. Each time we meet we read a few verses or a chapter out loud and then stop to discuss it before going on. We enjoy a free-ranging discussion of what was read and its implications. Currently, we are reading the Psalms and would love your input.

Course in Modern Jewish Intellectual History

There are contemporary denominational schisms within the Jewish community particularly between Orthodox and non-Orthodox communities. There have also been a number of such schisms in the past. Professor of Modern Jewish History, David B. Ruderman of the University of Pennsylvania, has put together a course, "Jewish Intellectual History: 16th to 20th Century" which illuminates such divisions and forms the backdrop of today's denominational splits. The course consists of 24 thirty-minute presentations that are on DVDs.

Join us for Temple's study and discussion group that meets twice a month on Sundays from 10:30 - 11:30 am to watch the lectures and talk about them. This month the classes will be on March 22 and 29 in the Social Hall.

Temple Beth Sholom Recognition Award: Miriam's Award Submit your Temple unsung hero today!

In the last few years, the Temple has recognized a few outstanding volunteers at each annual meeting and presented them with an award. This award is given for outstanding support for the Temple Beth Sholom community through acts of deed and love. These qualities are much like those demonstrated by the strong and courageous Miriam, often the unsung hero.

Each year the Miriam's Award recipients (who can be male or female) will be selected from submissions from the congregation. This award is for a person who makes a continuous and significant contribution (perhaps behind-the-scenes) without whose efforts many activities and events in the Temple would not enjoy as much success. Please fill out the form below and send it in (or e-mail it) to the Temple office by March 20.
